Emma Olnäs Fors is a partner of Mannheimer Swartling, a member of the Mergers and Acquisitions practice group and Co-Chair of the firm's Energy industry group. Emma has extensive M&A experience across a large number of industries in both domestic and international contexts. She regularly acts for industrial companies, including many of Sweden's household names, private equity firms and owner-managed companies. She also has experience from transactions with family-owned businesses. In addition to private acquisitions and divestments, Emma is regularly engaged in complex international spin-offs, mergers (particularly joint ventures), restructuring and company law matters. As Co-Chair of our Energy group, Emma has considerable experience in the industry, in particular the wind power sector in which she has recently advised on several of the largest onshore wind farm projects in Sweden and Europe. In addition, Emma is an expert in handling complex projects within solar energy, district heating and electricity distribution. Emma is also a member of the firm's Automotive industry group and has over a number of years handled acquisitions, divestments and joint ventures in the wider automotive sector. Emma is a regular university lecturer and teaches M&A transaction process and due diligence.
