Johan Lindström is a member of Mannheimer Swartling's Contracts, Tech, Intellectual Property and Compliance practice group.

He has extensive experience on legal advice, commercial negotiations, contractual advisory work and legal analysis, particularly within IT and digitisation. Johan advises both domestic and international clients – in both private and public sectors – on strategic planning, contractual management, disputes, and regulatory compliance.

Johan has particular expertise in transformation, development, and outsourcing projects, as well as performance- and results-based contracts. He has extensive experience in system- and cloud deliveries, license- and R&D agreements, and IT-procurements. His work frequently involves complex issues related to data protection, information security, and digital regulatory compliance.

Johan also continuously provides clients with legal advice on technology-related transactions and has supported several high-profile deals within the tech sector.
